EXPLORE LIKE THE LEGENDS

Legendary explorers and aviators

ushered in the heroic age of Antarctic exploration with gripping tales of their journeys, spearheading technological advances that laid the foundations for the mechanical age of discovery. Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd accomplished the first flight over the South Pole during the U.S. expedition of 1928 to 1930, utilizing groundbreaking navigational technology. His subsequent expeditions to Antarctica would greatly advance polar research and mapping of the continent. As one of the most remote regions left in the world, Antarctica retains the mystique of nature in its most pristine form.
